WINDMILL IN AUGUST

ALVO, NE

www.alvonebraska.com

It is unique. It is one of a kind. No other community in the United States is known by the name "Alvo." Early settlers had come to this area as early as 1869; they had established a post office, school district and town. The railroad was the main means of transportation so towns were established along its lines. Alvo reportedly received its name from the first child born after the community began to form around the depot. Her name was Alvo and she was the daughter of the railroad's master.

AVOCA, NE

The Village of Avoca was established in 1882. Avoca has celebrated several community events over the years with one of the finest being the Centennial Celebration in 1982. For more than 100 years this little village has been able to keep its population at around 250. The only exception is the Annual Avoca "QUACK OFF" Duck Races, which for the past 34 years has always been on the last Saturday of January. What started out as a bar room bet between two men, has now become a one-day population explosion for Avoca. The popularity of the Duck Races has welcomed more than 2,500 folks annually just to experience the small-town life for a day. Avoca continues to be "Small Town Proud." Visitors are always welcome.

CEDAR CREEK, NE

www.cedarcreeknebraska.com

Cedar Creek, named for cedar trees growing along its banks, empties into the Platte River 13 miles west of Plattsmouth. In 1861, just seven years after Nebraska was opened for settlement, John Inhelder, an immigrant from Switzerland, purchased 520 acres of Cass County land and set aside 40 acres for the development of a new town, "Inhelder Station." Today, with a population of nearly 400 year-round residents and over 1,000 summer residents, Cedar Creek is a flourishing river resort with five private lakes, a post office, village hall/fire station and several restaurants.

EAGLE, NE

www.eaglenebraska.com

Three men named "Sam" were instrumental in the early development of the town of Eagle. Sam Prouty, an early settler to the region, took aim and shot an eagle from the sky. Proud of this trophy, he chose "Eagle" for the name of the post office, which he established in his home on November 5, 1869. Sam McClintic sold land to the Missouri Pacific Railroad in 1886 as construction began on the branch line from Weeping Water to Lincoln. He turned down the idea that the town be called "McClintic" in his honor, suggesting that they use the name of the nearby post office, "Eagle," instead. Sam English came to Eagle during its first year and opened its general store as well as edited the local newspaper, the Eagle Eaglet. Eagle celebrated its centennial in grand fashion in 1986.

BESS STREETER ALDRICH MURAL

ELMWOOD, NE

www.elmwoodnebraska.com

Elmwood, located on a hill in the southwest part of the county, was founded in 1868 when a post office was established near a grove of elm trees. Because of these trees, Postmaster David McCaig, a Civil War veteran, chose the name "Elmwood." McCaig's cabin was actually on Stove Creek several miles north of the present town. Later, he moved to a store about a mile to the east, where mail arrived by horse and buggy. Elmwood's population, which was 645 in 1910, currently stands at 634. Elmwood has many lovely new homes. Elmwood's founders would be proud, as its residents continue to improve the community and keep their dream of an active town alive well into its second century.

www.visitexit426.com

The Exit 426 partners have come together to help people from Nebraska and all around the Midwest find the recreation and leisure options they're looking for. They realize that everyone needs a break sometimes, a way to escape the grind of daily life, but with finite time and seemingly limitless responsibilities it can be hard to get away. It can be a daunting obstacle to plan a getaway whether it's for yourself, your family or a group of friends; sometimes it can seem like herding cats. Not to worry, just a short drive from Lincoln and Omaha on Interstate 80 is Exit 426 and the mix of options afforded when you combine all of the partners: Carol Joy Holling Center, Cellar 426, Round the Bend Steakhouse, Lee G. Simmons Conservation Park and Wildlife Safari, the Strategic Air & Space Museum, Mahoney State Park and Iron Horse and Quarry Oaks golf courses. Think of all the possibilities just down the road at Exit 426.

COMMUNITY HISTORIES

GREENWOOD, NE

www.greenwoodnebraska.com

Greenwood is located at the westernmost end of Cass County, just 4 miles south of the Saunders County line and 1 mile from the Lancaster line. The first resident of this area was Silas Greenwood, an Indian trapper and hunter who lived with his white wife and family in a dugout along Salt Creek in the early 1860s. The village was named for him. In addition to its big elevator, Greenwood has a candy factory. In addition to a small business district, Greenwood has a nice park and a good ball field.

LOUISVILLE, NE

www.louisvillenebraska.com

Louisville is nestled in the tree-lined hills in north-central Cass County bordered by the Platte River. In addition to good croplands and an abundance of wildlife, the area is rich in limestone, sand and clay. Gardner Powers first settled here in 1857, building a log cabin on Mill Creek just south of what is now 3rd Street. He registered a plat for the town of "Louisville" in February of that year, which was incorporated under a special act of the territorial legislature. Because of its proximity to Omaha and Lincoln, Louisville will always be in competition for business. However, with the development of recreation like camping, swimming, canoeing and fishing at the Louisville State Recreation area and its proximity to the Platte River State Park, Louisville, with a population of 1,022, brings people from the city to enjoy its small-town cafes, unique shops, grocery store, pharmacy, doctor and dentist, realtor, car dealer and banks, along with its school and churches.

MANLEY, NE

www.manleyne.com

Located within a stone's throw of the geographic center of Cass County is the little town of Manley, first known as "Summit" for the breathtaking view in all directions. In early days, there were three ranchers in the vicinity by the name of Manley, and the town was probably named for one of them. The first steps toward organization were taken in 1945, with incorporation not completed until 1954, exactly 100 years after the Territory was opened for settlement. Manley owes its existence to the Missouri Pacific Railroad, which built its main line from Atchison, Kan., to Omaha in 1881-82. This line traversed Cass County south to north coming through Avoca, Weeping Water, Manley and on to Louisville.

MURDOCK, NE

www.murdocknebraska.com

A lot of living had occurred in this area before the town of Murdock was founded. Both the Oxbow Trail and the Mullen Ranch had come and gone. Farms were acquired either through homesteading or purchase from the railroad. Interestingly, 91 percent of the land in the 43 sections in this area is owned by families who have been here more than 100 years. When the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad built a line from Omaha to Colorado in December 1890, and needed a "water station" at this location, the town of Murdock was born. Murdock's population has remained a stable 200-250 throughout the years. Life centers around the agricultural interests with its co-op elevator, seed farm, bank, and array of businesses.

MURRAY, NE

www.murraynebraska.com

In the spring of 1872, a young bachelor, Joe Burton, occupied the only dwelling in the area. This was a one-room cabin in a grove of trees 4 miles west and 1 mile south of "Rock Bluffs," a flourishing steamboat town along the Missouri River. It was not until 1884 that a post office was established in the blacksmith shop of William Loughridge. The village was named "Murray" in honor of the Rev. George Reed Murray, the first resident pastor of the church. Today, Murray enjoys its small-town identity but also a metropolitan appearance. Beaver Lake is a sizable housing development east of town along the Missouri River. The Highway 75 corridor north of Murray links Murray to Bellevue and Omaha.

LOUISVILLE MAIN STREET

NEHAWKA, NE

On June 18, 1855, Samuel Kirkpatrick came from Iowa to stake his claim in Cass County, where Nehawka is today. That fall, he built the first sawmill in the area on the north banks of the Weeping Water Creek. The following year other families moved to the area. Because the name "Weeping Water" had already been chosen by a settlement upstream, they chose the name "Nehawka," meaning "rustling water." A postal address was approved for that name on January 8, 1875. As Nehawka celebrated its 100th birthday, citizens paused to reflect on the proud heritage of their little town and the people who made it such a nice place to live.

PLATTSMOUTH COURTHOUSE

PLATTSMOUTH, NE

www.plattsmouthnebraska.com

Located at the confluence of the Platte and Missouri rivers, our town played an important role during Nebraska's formative years. Samuel Martin obtained a license to operate a ferry across the Missouri at "Coonville" (now Glenwood), Iowa. In 1852, even before Nebraska was a territory opened for settlement, Martin received a permit from the Secretary of War to establish a trading post at what was to become "Plattsmouth." He built a two-story house, and another building in which he met to trade with the Otoe and Pawnee Indians who lived nearby. When this location was passed over for the territorial capital, a town-company was formed October 26, 1854. The following March it was incorporated by the Legislature and named the seat of government in Cass County, which stretched "... to the west boundary of ceded lands." The annual Kass County King Korn Carnival (now known as the Plattsmouth Harvest Festival) was first held in 1931 to lift the spirits of Depression-weary residents, and has continued to be a big annual event. This rural-urban cooperation continues to play a vital role in Plattsmouth's modern-day development.

SOUTH BEND, NE

www.southbendnebraska.com

W. H. Hill from Iowa and T. W. Fountain from Connecticut crossed the Missouri River at Plattsmouth in late 1856 on a flatboat. They traveled west together until they arrived at a creek they could not cross. Here, they set about to build their homes, becoming the first white settlers on the "south bend" of the Platte. Previous to this, the Nebraska culture of the prehistoric Woodland Indians, and much later the Pawnee and Otoe, lived in this area. It is here that the Platte River makes a sweeping turn to the northeast. In April 1857, the town of "South Bend" was platted. The years have seen many changes in South Bend. The prospects for the next 100 years are bright.

UNION, NE

www.unionnebraska.com

Only a few miles from the Missouri, settlers arrived in southeastern Cass County as early as 1855. The cluster of houses called "Stringtown," located on the east side of Weeping Water Creek in the 1880s, was the forerunner of Union. In 1887, when the Missouri Pacific Railroad began surveying for a rail line from Nebraska City to Lincoln, G. A. Rose saw the potential for business and built a store. A siding added to the excitement felt in the area. The following year, several of the small inland post offices consolidated into one, called "Pleasant Grove" by the residents, and was moved to an office at the rail center by Postmaster Robert Frans. In 1890, when the enterprising MP started laying a line northward to Omaha, the village of "Union" was established. It was this junction or "union of the two rail lines" that gave Union its name.

WILDFLOWERS NEAR SOUTH BEND

WEeping WATER, NE

www.weepingwaternebraska.com

An Indian legend tells of a battle which began when one tribe stole the daughter of another tribe's chief, and ended three days later when all the braves lay dead. The tears cried by the families of the fallen warriors were said to have formed the "weeping waters." The first white settlers arrived in March 1856. Elam Flower and Darrell Reed built a log house, which was used at various times as a church, a school and a stable. In 1857, a post office named "Weeping Water" was established. The town incorporated in 1870. The railroad, that arrived in 1883, ensured its continued existence and by 1888, Weeping Water achieved the status of a second-class city. Many things have changed. The steam whistle of an approaching passenger train no longer echoes across the valley, and the livery stable has been replaced by the Stop and Shop Convenience Store and Keckler Oil Company. However, older buildings on Main Street still house an auto parts store, a grocery store, speciality shops, a law office, a hardware store and a bank. Limestone from the three quarries is still transported all around the globe. Local residents work hard to put on annual events — "Limestone Days," Fall Festival, Come Home for the Holidays and the Cass County Fair.

BARN QUILT TOUR

Barn Quilt Tour

Elmwood/Murdock, NE
embarnquilts.weebly.com

Take a drive around Elmwood and Murdock to see the Barn Quilts created by the Elmwood-Murdock High School Future Business Leaders of America. They wanted to "IMPACT" the community by Involving Members, Promoting Activities, and Creating Tourism. Adding painted quilt blocks to prominent barns seemed like a good idea because together they created a unique tourist attraction with long-term potential. Twelve 8' x 8' barn quilts were created by Elmwood-Murdock art students, while FBLA members developed publicity, solicited barns, and generated funds for the project. All members of the chapter are convinced this project will impact the community for years to come. Go to elmur.org for more details and to print a brochure, or access the Barn Quilt Tour information by visiting embarnquilts.weebly.com.
